moneyQuest opens new Glasgow HQ at 123 & announces growth plans

Financial services firm moneyQuest - one of the UK's leading telephone and online mortgage, insurance and loan brokers, who enjoyed company growth last year of 30% - have had Glasgow City Council Leader Steven Purcell officially open their new HQ in Glasgow's prime office space at 123 St Vincent Street. moneyQuest's new Managing Director Paul Reynolds has also announced major company moves, including a restructuring of its Board and the company's first globalisation plans. The company will now create 150 new jobs as it expands operation hours at their new HQ with new full and part-time flexible working patterns at evenings and weekends.

Glasgow Chamber of Commerce Chief Executive Lesley Sawers said: "This is excellent news for the city and our already very successful financial services sector, which now employs 14% of people living in Glasgow. We need to support more companies like moneyQuest who are committed long-term to the city and are using Glasgow as the base to grow their business. The Chamber is particularly pleased to be at moneyQuest's HQ opening, as they were the winner of the Overall Best Performing Business prize at our recent Glasgow Business Awards."
